A well known sporting man, speaking about the projected encounter between the Calitornian and the champion, said: "I regard this last move of Corbett's as the shrewdest he has ever made. Corbett wants to make this match because he sees much in it for himself. Suppose the champion should knock him out. The great mass of people would ·Well, it took a champion to whip him,' and the matter would rest Corbett would still be able to other matches. Puglistic encounters are conducted in a peculiar way in the Ciermont Avenue Rink, Brooklyn. Before the ball opens there is a long wait. That wait is for the city officials. They finally file in and occupy the seats that have been reserved for them. The Sergeant commanding the license squad then takes a prominent position near the ring. Then one of the inspectors of police, in citizen's clothes, comes in alone and occupies a chair reserved for him adjacent to the timekeepers. The referee then whispers to the Inspector. The announcer then issues the orders of the hight as follows: "Unnecessary noise of any sort will not be permitted. If persisted in, the bout will be stopped by order of the Inspector."

The irlends of Jack Skelly and Jack Gomman are preparing to ignore these little formalities when they meet on March 17. Lydia Thompson was the attraction at Niblo's Garden.—Lydia, the perennial, the over-entertaining and the bristingly energetic. The performance was made up of three plays entitled "A Bad Penny," "Uncle Dan" and "A Bric.-a-Brac Shop." Miss Thompson appeared in the last two, and did very good work indeed. Niblo's is not the best place in the world for what is called a "triple bill," but, take it all in all, the programme was an acceptable one. In "A Bric.-a-Brac Shop" Miss Thompson appeared as a Watteau shepherdess. Alf Hampton and Harry Hanscombe were in the cast.

Rose Coghlan was the star at the Harlem Opera-House last night, when she presented "Lady Barter" and "Nance Oldfield." In both of these plays the charming actress is familiar to New Yorkers. "Lady Barter" is not an entertaining affair. It is duil, bulky and stupid. The dialogue is heavy and the situations stilled. Miss Coghlan played the title role, and her brother Charles appeared in the play, which he wrote, by the bye. "Nance Oldfield" is a delightful little comedy, and in it miss Coghlan was seen at her best.

March 15.—The order of J. Reed Whipple & Co., proprietors of Young's Hotel, and the Parker House, compelling all their waiters to remove their beards, resulted in a special meeting of the Boston Waiters' Alliance last night.

Resolutions were adopted instructing the waiters not to comply with the order and as-serting that, should the threat to discharge those who do not comply be carried out, the Alliance (embracing every hote; and restau-rant in the city) would give the discharged men their hearty support.

A member of the Alliance says that this means a general strike.
